Pastors Isaiah and Gloria Williams host an interview with Bonnie Dyer. Dyer, a former school teacher, travels around the U.S. holding seminars entitled Success Through Effective Communication. Dyer's main objective is to teach youngsters what real values are all about. She teaches people practical approaches as she emphasizes the need to learn from our mistakes. Dyer says that young people today need to be taught (from the ground level up) what leadership really is. People will know where you stand, she says, "by what comes out of your mouth."

Mott responds that there should be alternatives when certain types of academic training is rejected by the student. Browne points out that because our society is a melting pot of many languages and cultures, it may be necessary to incorporate such devices, but it can become a handicapping system. Cliff Schimmels from Wheaton College discusses problems in the educational system in America with Jay Jones. Author of What Parents Try To Forget About Adolescence and Parents' Most Asked Questions About Kids, contends that our present educational system is allowing basic skills to drop through the cracks: math and language skills. Parents need to take an active daily interest in their children's lives, and thus recognize weaknesses. They should also become involved in various school activities relating to their children.

Jay Jones discusses a different type of education from the public school system with Sandy Gogel, a home schooling designer. Director of "The Sycamore Tree," Sandy describes their home schooling programs in which they are able to include Biblical studies. This program is designed to provide motivational ideas for parents and children. Helping get parents involved in their children's education and their lives provides a background for children that is stable and dependable. Through a well-rounded, enriched program of motivational techniques, rewards, recognitions, and achievement recognition, young people are adequately prepared for college. This home schooling program is appealing to families disenchanted with the public schools, with traveling families, and to those who want solid Christian training.

They discuss advantages and disadvantages of home schooling. They point out that education has the power to shape one's mind, and parents are finding that in the public schools they aren't able to exert any control over what their children are taught, even if it contradicts the child's home background values. The origin of education in America was in the home and religious instruction was given. Parents need to bring religious issues into their child's education. There seems to exist judicial hostility and prejudice towards Christianity by the states in their control of the curriculum.

Jay Sekulow, attorney, and founder of C.A.S.E. (Christian Advocates Serving Evangelism) of San Francisco chairs a discussion concerning religion in public schools. His guests are: Dr. Charles E. Rice, professor of law at Notre dame School of Law; Pat Monaghan, founder, and co-chairman with Dr. Charles E. Rice of "Free Speech Advocates," a non-profit, legal defense organization working to defend the right of pro-life advocates; and David Barton, founder of "Specialty Research Associated, Inc." of Aledo, Texas. His most recent book is America, To Pray Or Not To Pray? The guests agree that there is no wording in the Constitution or other documents specific to the separation of church and state. Monaghan remarks that the freedom of religion clause should be the basis of turning America around in allowing prayer back into public schools. Christian schools are teaching very positive values because all moral law originates from the Bible.

They discuss education in the public schools, and the deteriorating discipline of the public school system. Offenses in the schools have risen dramatically with an alarming rise in suicides, drug abuse, alcohol abuse, and teenage pregnancy. Such conditions tend to lower moral, as well as SAT scores of the entire student body. Barton points out that sexually transmitted diseases have increased

Pat Robertson introduces a feature on the state of education in America. He reports that the SAT scores are well below the 1960 scores. Our ninth graders are well below other industrialized countries, and our high school seniors are worse in math than 18 industrialized nations. Research is now revealing that the disintegration of the family and the lack of a stabilizing family structure results in poor performance of the children. Gary Bauer, President of Family Research Council cites the Vietnamese boatchildren as a good example of successful students as a result of the parents' teaching of hard work and respect for authority. Patrick Fagan, Senior Vice president of Free Congress Foundation says that parents are alienated by educational philosophies espoused by the schools, introduced by John Dewey who ignored home and family, and stressed freedom in his exhaustive work Democracy In Education. William Bennett, former Secretary of Education says the bonding between parent and child is critical. He would like for parents to receive educational vouchers so they could send children where they wanted to.

Junior high teacher Gene Soltner says his greatest challenge is to help each student feel good about himself. One veteran teacher says TV has molded kids' minds and attitudes and they want to be entertained. Pat Robertson says that hindering factors for teachers are single parents dumping their problems on teachers. Often childrens' home lives contribute to their non-readiness to learn at school. Sheila Walsh interviews Guy Doud who was a school drop out, but was recently named "Teacher Of The Year" by President reagan. Overweight with a poor self-image, Guy was influenced by a Christian teacher, accepted jesus, and his life turned around. He warns that America's christian foundation is being eroded as almost every reference to God, the church, its influence on the formation of our democracy, the religious beliefs of the founding fathers are being eradicated from the nation's textbooks, and classroom teaching. The prohibition of prayer in the schools, student Bible clubs, giving thanks over food, or reading the Bible in the cafeteria-- all these give overt warning that an overt plan is developing to completely secularize our educational system.
